LBCC Policy & Administrative Rule

The LBCC Administrative Rule on Nondiscrimination & Nonharassment, including prohibitions on dating violence, domestic violence, partner violence, stalking, sexual assault and related offenses may be found at <https://www.linnbenton.edu/about-lbcc/administration/policies/board-policies-and-administrative-rules/1000-series-the-college/ar-1015-01.php>. We summarize your rights and information here for ease of use.

LBCC Student Conduct Code

The LBCC Student Rights Responsibilities and Conduct Code prohibits illegal discrimination by a student. The LBCC policy on student conduct, behavior, rights, and processes may be found in full at <https://www.linnbenton.edu/about-lbcc/administration/policies/student-rights-responsibilities-and-conduct.php>.

Employee Standards of Conduct

The LBCC policy on employee conduct is found at <https://www.linnbenton.edu/about-lbcc/administration/policies/board-policies-and-administrative-rules/1000-series-the-college/bp-1045.php>.

Brochure & Written Information Provided

LBCC provides a brochure with additional information on Sexual Assault, Dating Violence, Domestic Violence, and Stalking. It may be found in the Advising Center, Student Affairs Administration Office, Public Safety Office, or on our website on the Student Right to Know Page.

VICTIMS' and ALL STUDENT RIGHTS –

Employees who are victims are entitled to rights under certain laws. Students who are victims are entitled to additional rights under certain laws.

Right to be Free From Sexual Assault, Harassment

LBCC students and employees have a right to be free from sexual harassment, assault, stalking, domestic and partner violence, per the laws and rules prohibiting illegal discrimination, harassment, and violence against women, as well as others.*

Right to Use an Advocate

A victim of violence under this policy is entitled to an Advocate. CARDV (Center Against Rape and Domestic Violence) is a community-based non-profit with trained advocates who can assist you to know and choose among your rights and options. You may also inquire about an LBCC Advocate through the LBCC Advising Center, Student Affairs Associate Dean/Administration Office or Public Safety. CARDV may be contacted at 541-754-0110 or 1-900-543-8077. (Tracy D., Cait M., Emily D.)

Confidentiality

If you speak with or work with an Advocate (CARDV or LBCC employed), the advocate is directed to keep all communications with you confidential. Advocate duties shall supercede all other roles. Advocates will disclose no information you request be kept private. All other LBCC parties have disclosure duties to protect public safety. LBCC counselors and advisors are generally not trained advocates (with one exception, Cait M.). Counselors may offer you counseling, problem solving, and emotional support. You may keep your assailant's name confidential. A counselor or advisor does not need to know who assaulted you if you desire not to tell or not to seek consequences against that person. If you provide information to a counselor or advisor that would cause the college to have fear that there is a general public safety danger and likelihood of future violence, please know that a counselor, advisor, and all other employees who are Public Safety Reporters do have a duty to report that information to the Associate Dean, Student Affairs, Public Safety, and/or to the LBCC Threat Assessment Team. (Examples, reports on repeated violence on LBCC property or reports of a chronic offender.) Otherwise, the counselor is directed to keep your information confidential. LBCC does not create medical records, but does create "student in distress" reports to help us track that we adequately support students in distress. The Associate Dean, Student Affairs, and the LBCC Threat Assessment Team will keep your information reported confidential and private, except to the extent necessary to serve you or protect public safety. If a court subpoenas conduct or academic records, LBCC will produce those records. The Associate Dean and the Human Resources Director do have access to these records in the process of gathering complete information about a student. LBCC may use any record in its possession as part of the evidence-gathering process to make an informed decision.

LBCC does not create medical records.

Counselors at LBCC do not provide therapy or treatment or diagnosis. Counselors act as advisors, career counselors, and provide problem solving and limited personal counseling. Their notes are not medical records and may be accessed in the information-gathering processes. LBCC does use academic records in investigations, where necessary. Access to such records is limited.

Right to Be Heard and Freedom from Forms of Self Incrimination/Immunity

You have a right to be heard. You have a right to tell your story and to be certain the college hears you. Both the victim and accused assailant have a right to be heard and have their statements neutrally evaluated prior to any findings of wrongdoing or before any loss or privileges. If a victim committed a coinciding violation of a college conduct policy during or preceding an incidence of violence or assault (such as illegal drinking), the college will grant immunity for that incident when our knowledge comes from a violence or Title IX report. We want victims of violence to be able to report without fearing they will be charged with a related violation (illegal drinking, drug use, speeding, or other violations).

Right to Due Process

With the right to be heard, comes a right to due process. If you are accused of an assault or if you are the victim, you have the right to know whether an investigation will be conducted. You have the right to make a statement and tell your story, you have the right to present evidence. You have the right to have a neutral, trained investigator assess the evidence and make a neutral, impartial determination of the facts. LBCC will use "more likely than not" as the standard of evidence to determine findings in these situations. You have the right for our processes to generally be concluded in 90 days. You have the right to a written decision. You have a right to appeal.

Right to Change Name or Request Directory Exclusion

You have the right to legally change your name and to bring evidence of a legal name change to Enrollment Services, Takena Hall, or Human Resources (if an employee) to have all records under your new name. You have the right to request "directory exclusion" from Enrollment Services (by written form) so LBCC will not disclose public information about you to those who inquire (name, phone, address, email, etc.).

Timelines

Generally, reports of violations or conduct code misbehavior should be filed within 30 days. Reports of sexual violence, domestic violence, partner violence, dating violence, or stalking must be filed within 180 days of the original incident with the college. Decisions to report after 180 days will rarely be processed as conduct violations; however, other victim supports and educational remedies may be available at LBCC. To file with police or courts, timelines are extended. However, immediate reporting always leads to the most thorough and effective investigations and outcomes for victims. Generally, “stay away” orders by LBCC may be issued within 24-48 hours of an interview with the Associate Dean, Student Affairs, as may other temporary remedies set in place during an investigation.

Support by LBCC Personnel

Instructors, classified employees and managers of LBCC will work with you to ensure you are provided supports and reasonable services if you are involved in one of these forms of violations. Employees in these locations are generally Public Safety Reporters. We will ensure you are informed of your rights, provided a fair process for review, offered support creating a safety and wellness plan, assisted with academic or other accommodations caused by the incident, and assisted to achieve your other goals. The Offices of Public Safety, Student Affairs, and Advising Center are appropriate places to go to begin an official report to the college of an incident at LBCC or involving a student or employee of LBCC (or person under our authority or control at LBCC).

REPORTING Options/Resources – Student Has Right to Choose

You have a right to use any or all of the following reporting and services options.

Hospital, Nurse, Doctor – Rape Kit

Free rape kits and examinations are available through local hospitals and specially trained nurses. The hospital can also provide additional information on your rights. We encourage you to preserve evidence, visit the hospital and preserve your rights. You do not have to decide before visiting the hospital whether you want to file a police report; you may delay that decision and ask for your examination to be preserved, giving you time to decide.

Police or Sheriff & Justice System

You may report to the POLICE or appropriate law enforcement. While we cannot require you to report to the police, we encourage you to promptly report, using these professional safety and security resources. If you have questions about which law enforcement office to report to, LBCC Public Safety can assist you with reporting options.

- a. Your legal rights will be best explained by law enforcement, but may include criminal charges against the perpetrator (where the state presses charges and consequences may include imprisonment or jail or other actions); or
- b. Civil case against the perpetrator (where you sue for damages, usually financial in nature);
- c. A Restraining Order, available through the courts.
- d. We encourage you to consult a lawyer. The Oregon State Bar can help you find a lawyer with the appropriate experience and expertise and can inform you of available legal aid services or law clinics in Oregon. If you are an OSU student, you may avail yourself of student legal services at OSU.
- e. You may request victims’ assistance if your case is prosecuted through the District Attorney’s victims’ assistance program.

Restraining Orders or Protective Orders or Temporary Restraining Orders (TROs)

You may request a restraining order through the local courts. A victim advocate can assist you with this process. Contact the courthouse in the county where the incident occurred

You may file a complaint with other state or federal offices or agencies (see end of document) and BP 1015-01, including the Office of Civil Rights, the Bureau of Labor and Industries (BOLI), Community College and Workforce Development (CCWD) or the Higher Education Coordinating Commission (HECC).

Report to LBCC

If you choose to report your attack to the college, which we encourage, you may report in person or online. You will be asked to give a written statement. Online reporting may be anonymous; we merely caution that anonymous reports are more difficult to investigate. To report online, go to linnbenton-advocate.symlicity.com/public_report_and_do_not_provide_your_true_name_or_LBCC_email_address_in_the_requested_information_lines_you_may_use_the_word "anonymous" or other obvious cue. To report in person, go to Public Safety, Red Cedar Hall, or call a Public Safety Officer 541-926-6855.

You may also report directly to one of the Title IX Officers. If your assailant was an employee, report to the Director of Human Resources, Calapooia Center. If your assailant was a student, report to the Associate Dean, Student Affairs, Takena Hall. Public Safety is required to track crime statistics and to create a public crime log. Their role is to help create a safer campus.

Public Safety & Safety Plan, Escorts

Besides taking your initial report, you may ask Public Safety to explain safety services and escorts on campus. You may also request that Public Safety help you to create a personal safety plan.

Student Affairs Report for "Relief" or Immediate Intervention &/or Conduct

Action/Associate Dean – If the accused person or offender is a student, processes will proceed under the Student Rights and Responsibility policies of LBCC. LBCC understands that a victim of violence has difficult decisions to make and often must make them in a time of turmoil and confusion. We have designed our processes to empower a victim and to fairly treat both victim and accused student. We have the following services (and others):

- An Advocate (Cait M., Tracy D., Emily D., CARDV)
- Counseling and emotional to help you negotiate processes and choices (Advising Center)
- Public Safety for safety planning and escorts on campus
- Early interventions: ability to change a schedule or remove a person from class with their offender or victim or accuser; campus escorts;
- Disability accommodations
- Workplace reassignment options
- Student conduct charging and investigation/'discipline processes for offenders

You will be invited to choose which services you wish to request, unless your report makes us aware of a wide general public safety danger, in which case we have a duty to protect the public before the duty of complete confidentiality. LBCC has a student conduct process and a staff behavioral code to help us teach and hold students and staff accountable for appropriate behaviors. The victim will be invited to make a decision whether s/he/they request the college to initiate conduct or behavioral investigation and action or whether they ask the college to refrain from these actions. Only if the situation presents an ongoing general danger to public safety will the college be required to make a decision to take action of a conduct nature against the wishes of the victim.

You will be asked if you want formal or informal conduct code action and/or investigations.

You may control keeping us from going to conduct processes by withholding the name of the person who assaulted you. You may provide the name to a counselor or advocate and still request no conduct action. If you decline conduct action, after 180 days after the incident, we will not be able to reverse that decision. We will provide all other services and reasonable supports that you request, whether or not you want a conduct action or disciplinary or educational intervention with the accused.

Why do I have this choice? Why would I want or not want conduct processes? The victim has the choice because these situations tend to take power away from an Individual. We strive to return that power. Some people want help, but also want to highly guard their privacy. Some people fear that a conduct investigation cause some information used in the investigation to lose its privacy. A conduct investigation might lead to worse violence. The college empowers victims to decide how you want to request us to work with you. You choose how you wish to be helped. We will do what is reasonable within our power and authority to serve you in ways you believe best meet your needs.

You will be asked to state whether “Yes” or “No”, do you want the college to pursue a conduct or behavioral investigation and sanctions? We will not pursue conduct actions without either your consent/request or our identification of a generalized public safety danger.

Human Resources Processes – if the Accused is an Employee

Director Scott Rolen, in Human Resources conducts investigations if the accused person is an LBCC employee. Scott investigates as a neutral and ensures that due process occurs during taking of statements, inquiry, investigation, and through decision-making and appeals.

SUPPORTS & SERVICES

Counseling & Emotional Support & Assistance Separating Students

LBCC provides on-campus limited personal counseling to help restore your safety and ability to participate in school effectively. Counselors may also help to refer you to counseling or therapy in our community, through private providers and county mental health agencies. Counselors can help with other forms of problem solving of academic and other life impacts and decisions. Their services will be confidential so long as there is no direct evidence of a public safety threat based on the information you share with them. A counselor may also be able to help you identify the support people in your life or family to help you at this difficult time. (If the assault happened on our property, they will have to alert Public Safety to the location of the assault.) You are not required to provide the name of the perpetrator even if known to you.

CFAR: Academic & Other Accommodations for School

Victims of assault and an accused student are likely to be experiencing trauma. Life may be seriously disrupted. Schedules and emotions may be in turmoil. It may be difficult to continue in school without some accommodations. You may work with one of these resources to request accommodations in such situations: CFAR (Center For Accessibility Resources); Counseling; or the Associate Dean, Student Affairs. Typical supports might include flexible attendance or extended due dates for work that might be late. Students may ask for help negotiating flexibility with instructors or may ask for support to drop or withdraw from classes and to work with financial aid. Students might ask to test outside of their class in quieter space. They might ask to change classes or for their assailant to be removed from their class. A student might ask for change in working assignment if working for LBCC.

Rights of the Accused Student

This guide is written with all students in mind. If you are accused of an assault or violence, your rights are also spelled out in the Student Rights publication noted above. You will be informed of any complaint or charge filed against you for purposes of investigation or disciplinary action. You have a right to be heard and present any evidence within your knowledge or control. You have the right to advance written notice of your hearing date and time. You have a right to a fair and impartial decision-maker to review the evidence and determine outcomes and responsibility, plus possible consequences. You have a right to know the “worst consequence” that might be administered in your case (which is normally either suspension for up to one year or expulsion permanently). You have the right to know the outcome of a disciplinary or conduct process. If you attend your hearing, you have one right of appeal to the next level review if you do not agree with the outcomes. If you do not attend your hearing and do not provide proof of an emergency, your case will be decided against you and shall be final and non-appealable. Students are expected to cooperate and to be truthful in a conduct investigation. A student may choose silence if it is in the student’s best interest.

Final Reminder about Safety and Confidentiality:

LBCC will do all in its power to protect your privacy and confidentiality. Generally, the victim of an assault has a great deal of power or control how the college uses information provided to us by the victim. However, if the accused student is found to create a general danger to public safety, LBCC must investigate and/or pursue conduct or actions to make safe. In such situations, we will use information necessary to keep the public safe.

Which LAWS drive my rights and these processes?

Some of the laws which drive these rights and processes include:

Oregon state laws, including Senate Bill 759

Federal laws, including: Title IX of the Education Amendments Act of 1972

The Jeanne Clery Act

VAWA (Violence Against Women Act) of 1994

Constitutional Due Process laws of the United State of America

Civil Rights laws of the United States (including Civil Rights Act of 1964)

Non-Discrimination laws of the United States

Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act, the Americans with Disabilities Act (as amended)

Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Right Act (USERRA)

Students and employees may file a complaint with the U.S. Department of Education, Office of Civil Rights and the Department of Community Colleges and Workforce Development or the Higher Education Coordinating Commission (with regulates LBCC). Employees may also file a complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and/or the Oregon Bureau of Labor and Industries Civil Rights Division (BOLI). Links are available on our Board Policy page, BP 1015-01 for filing complaints. Staff will also provide you further guidance upon request.
